Western Towns Laid Waste-Great Loss of Property. Saint Cloud and Sauk Rapids, Minn., were swept by a very destructive cyclone on the afternoon of the 15th. Bridget Rowe, aged 47, and her daughter, by a volcanic eruption. Its passage was so rapid that its terrible work was scarcely realized before it had passed over. Houses and other buildings were literally dashed to pieces and completely blocked up the street. The scene was most terrible; great numbers of mangled corpses lay in every direction, and the cries of the injured people pinned to the earth by the debris were most heartrending. The clothes of the dead were torn into shreds, their faces blackened by dust, scalps torn from their heads, eyes were ripped from the sockets, and altogether the scene was too terrible to be described. At Sauk Rapids the action of the cyclone was very similar and the damage to property aimost incalculable. At St. Cloud 18 people were killed outright and 54 injured. At Sauk Rapids nearly 40 persons lost their lives. One of the most distressing occurrences at the France.—Sixty-eight cases of cholera have Somerville, Mass., on Saturday last. Bagley latter place was the killing of 10 people, who had assembled at a wedding party, the groom being among the number, and the bride was so terribly injured that she survived but a few hours. In Sauk Rapids alone 200 houses were leveled to the ground, and the loss in St. Cloud was about in the same proportion. Large numbers of physicians and surgeons arrived from the surrounding towns and did what they could to alleviate the misery of the wounded people. It will be remembered that about two years ago a similar calamity visited the towns of New Ulm and Rochester, and that great loss of life and property ensued. Late telegrams from St. Cloud and Sauk Rapids state that 74 dead bodies have so far been found, and that 213 persons were injured.

A cyclone also passed over Monroe and Nodaway Counties, Mo., destroying dwellings, barns, outhouses and killing thousands of dollars' worth of stock. Three persons were killed and many injured, and on the same day a cyclone struck the town of Coon Rapids, Iowa, and almost completely demolished it, but no casualties are reported from that point.

Lived for Three Years With a Broken Neck. Frank Spencer, of Elizabeth, N. J., fell while exercising on a horizontal bar in April, 1883. He was carried home insensible, and the dectors who were summoned pronounced his neck broken, and said that he could not live an hour, but after lying unconscious for four days he recovered his senses but was completely paralyzed. He lingered in this condition for two years, and an operation was then performed on him by an eminent surgeon of New York.

An incision was made in the back of his neck and down the spine eight inches from the base of the skull, and the vertebrae were exposed. It was found that splinters of the vertebræ and other pieces of bone had been crushed into the spinal column, killing the nerves and checking circulation of the blood, producing paralysis. It was hoped by the surgeons that the portion of the spinal column which had become dead could be taken out, and the two live ends of the column joined together. These were taken out and the parts were thoroughly cleaned. It was then found that the distance, four and a balf inches, was too great to bring the severed ends of the spinal cord together. The incision was sewed up and the patient recovered from the operation, Dr. Morris saying that though the desired results had not been obtained, yet the life of Spencer would be prolonged and attended with less pain. The young man lived another year, but never during that time moved a limb. His case was a wonder to many medical men. On Wednesday of last week he died at the age of 31 years.

Gen. Grant's Monument.

The structure if erected according these plans will occupy a space of 60 by 156 feet. It will be one story in hight and of the Grecian style of architecture. The memorial will face the east and have a spacious entrance or triumphal arch of large proportions, forming a vestibule in the halls beyond. The center of the open space is intended for the sarcophagus. Directly over the arch and in front of it is a group in marble, symbolical of the Union of the North and South. The vestibule is surrounded by a pyramid, crowned at the top, representing in heroic figure the dead hero. Flanking the triumphal arch at the base of the pyramid are equestrian statues of famous Generals in the rebellion, while in the two corners are to be placed bronzed groups representing the "Army and Navy." On the sides of the arch to be panels, in relief, representing the battles of Shiloh and Gettysburg.

A stairway on each side leads to the rostrum. Passing through the vestibule, or Memorial Hall, the "hall of trophies" is reached, and from these entrance is had to the "hall of fame" for the reception of busts and medallions of illustrious Generals and other distinguished Americans. Beyond these halls is to be a library and reading room and apartments for the residence of the superintendent and other officers of the memorial. THE SOLDIERS' ORPHANS. Children of Deceased Soldiers Treated Like Brutes

The Governor's Report. On the 15th Gov. Pattison completed and promulgated, in the form of a series of letters, the result of his investigation of the Soldiers' Orphans' Schools of Pennsylvania. The first of these letters is addressed to the Attorney-General, and gives a summary of the abuses that have been perpetrated by the managers of the schools. After giving the reasons that in-fluenced the Governor to make the investigation, and the means employed to get at the facts, the letter proceeds as follows:

The testimony shows a most pitiful, cruel, and inhuman neglect of the children; a want of the commonest necessaries of decent living, insufficient moral and religious training, as well as suggestions of depravity and immoral practices in some of the schools that are too vile for enumeration. If the evidence was not so overwhelming and undoubted, in most instances confirmed by personal observa-tion, it would be difficult to believe that in this age, and in our own Commonwealth, such practices were possible. In some schools, during the entire Winter, the children were not supplied with Winter clothing, but were compelled to endure the rigors of the season with Summer or, at least, Fall garments. Children-some sick, many frail, and most of tender years—lived through the Winter without any undergarments of any kind upon their persons, and, in palliation of this neglect, the school managers declared that they had not provided them because the department regulations did not specify undergarments in the list of articles to be furnished each obild.

The buildings are entirely unfitted for the purposes for which they are used. There was an absence of the most ordinary conveniences of a home. Not a chair, not a peg. not a piece of furniture other than a bed was to be found in bedrooms. While making the favestigation at one school ham, almost raw and entirely unfit for human food, was taken from the dinner table where the children were eating. Without further specification of defective food it is sufficient to state that figures were presented by the principal of one school showing that the average cost of a meal per child was $2\frac{1}{2}$ cents. A careful estimate also shows that some breakfasts cost $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per head, and some suppers 11/4 cepts per head.

After continuing the details through a dozen papers of foolscap, the Governor adds: A sadder or more shameful story of deliberate human cruelty could not be exhibited. Making allowance for some overstatement or inaccuracy in witnesses, and giving due consideration to the pos-sibility of errors of judgment or abuse of confidence reposed, yet the weight of the facts is such as to leave no doubt that the bounty of the State has been wasted and misappropriated; that the Com-monwealth has been defrauded by dishonest and orafty speculators, and that many of the unfortunate orphans have been in a worse condition than if they had been left to the uncertain charity of the

I therefore deem it my duty to refer the testimony taken at the investigation to you for official action. My own powers in the premises, either to correct the evils or to punish the offenders, are, unhappily, very limited. Such as they are, however, I shall exercise them. I have removed the two inspectors. The Superintendent of Public Instruction is not subject to summary removal by me, but I have this day requested his resignation in order that a reorganization of the schools may be accomplished. The General Assembly not being in session, no legislation can now be had. There is nothing, therefore, that I can now do beyond what I have stated, except to request you to exhaust all the power of your department to punish those who have made themselves amenable to the criminal

Another letter is addressed to Dr. Higbee, Superintendent of the schools. In that the Governor says: In view of the recent disclosures of abuses, mismanagement, and neglect in the Department of Soldiers' Orphans' Schools which have taken place during your incumbency as Superintendent, I deem it for the best interests of the State and the schools that there should be a change in the official direction of that department. The circumstances appear to me to demand your resignation as Superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphans' Schools, and I there-fore request that you will give me an opportunity to appoint to the head of that department some one who will assist me in the reorganization of the schools and their superintendence in a way more in second with my views of duty and the requirements of the law, as to which we evidently so radically differ, and as to which harmonious views and nction are of such great importance for the well being of the department.

Other letters are addressed to the Rev. J. W. Sayers and Mrs. E. E. Hutter, inspectors, dismissing them from the service, and the last is The design for Gen. Grant's monument has addressed to Gen. Cannibalism by Entombed Miners. [London Times.]

Excavations in the Chancelade quarries, where it will be remembered a landslip occurred last October, burying a number of workmen, have been carried on ever since for the purpose of unearthing the bodies. For many days after the slip was believed to have smothered the workers smoke was seen to issue from the ruins. Soldiers and quarrymen, directed by a party of engineers, worked day and night in the hope of taking the men out alive. Ever since the work has proceeded, but of late the endeavors were not so vigorously plied. The diggers have now reached the actual spot where the men were engaged at the time of the accident, and on penetrating into a gallery cut in the stone the explorers discovered the body of a young man lying on the ground. Photographs taken of the position show that a dreadful state of affairs must have come about when the men uncrushed found themselves entombed. It appears undoubted that some of the men tried to prolong their lives by killing and eating their companions in misfortune. A few solitary arms and limbs have been picked up in their prison, and everything points to the fact that cannibalism was resorted to. The young man whose body was unmutilated seems to have survived the others and to have died of hunger.

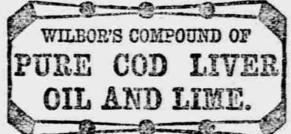

Miss Morosini Bitten by a Dog. Miss Amelia Morosini, sister of the lady who got into such notoriety lately by marrying her father's coachman, was bitten by a dog on the 15th. She was walking in the grounds surrounding her father's residence, at Riverdale, N. Y., when she saw the rabid animal coming up the railroad track toward her. She ran, but the dog pursued and overtook her. Her screams were heard by policeman Finnigan, who drove the dog off and killed it with a shot from his rovolver. Miss Morosini, however, had already been bitten.

Sad Fate of a Mother and Child.

Mrs. Thorp and her young daughter were burning stalks in a field near Paragould, Ark., when the clothing of the little girl caught fire, soon enveloping her in flames. Her screams attracted the mother's attention, who ran to her child's relief, but the grass was also on fire, and before Mrs. Thorp reached the child her own clothing caught fire and both were burned to death.

Get the Genuine Article.-The great popularity of "Wilbor's Compound of Cod-Liver Oil and Line' has induced some unprincipled persons to attempt to pain off a simple article of their own manufacture; but any person who is suffering from Coughs, Colds, or Consump tion, should be careful where they purchase this article. It requires no puffing. The results of its use are its best recommendations; and the proprietor has ample evidence on file of its extraordinary success in pulmonary com-plaints. The Phosphate of Lime possesses a most marve lons healing power, as combined with the pure Cod-Live Oil by Dr. Wilbor. This medicine is regularly prescribes by the medical faculty. Sold by A. B. Wilhor, Chemist Boston, and all druggists.

The use of Ridge's Food produces good healthy flesh, not a puffy, flabby skin, but plenty of hone and muscle. The child likes it, and, as to nature's supply, so the little one turns readily from all playthings, and finds complete satisfaction in this the best substitute for the mother's milk. Do not let your children grow up weak and puny, when Ridge's Food can be obtained at so small cost. NUMAN'S LAWN PUMP
